And if you (or someone you know) is a younger gamer, we're also releasing resources to make it even easier to get into D&D. However, the issue with prewritten adventures is that they tend to be expensive. As an aded resource for gamers, the D&D team is pleased to offer the following material as adventures and resources for use in your games—whether you're playing in a kitchen table campaign, you're an active participant in the D&D Adventurers League, or are simply interested in learning more about Dungeons & Dragons and trying it out for yourself. And these are some high-quality adventures that are right up there with the free adventures offered by Wizards of the Coast. 2 Minute Tabletop 2 Minute Tabletop is a great website that offers all sorts of cool content. Most of the books written by Wizards of the Coast retail for close to $50. If you're not into the idea of creating a custom world and story, there's nothing wrong with using prewritten ones. Part of the content offered is adventures for DMs to fun with their players. There are quite a few adventures for characters level 1-5, and a bunch for higher-level characters as well. 2. It has some content that is exclusive to it, so you might find something there that isn't on DM Guild. Third-party adventures generally cost money as well, meaning the DM is forced to throw down hard-earned money to get an adventure going (unless nice players are willing to chip in).
